DAKIN BROS. OF CHINA, LIMITED.

AGENTS FOR PARKER, DAVIS & Co's, SPECIALITIES, CASCARA-CORDIAL.

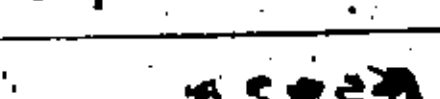

A non-alcoholic preparation of the now universally used Cascara Sagrada. In those cases of constipation and indigestion where Cascara is indicated, this cordial can be used with confidence; it is pleasantly flavoured and combined with aromatics that prevent griping, and cover the objectionable bitter taste which is the one great objection to the use of this medicine.

Sold in original flasks at $1.25.

CONCENTRATED DISTILLED EXTRACT WITH CHERRY HAZEL.

This preparation, sold under various fancy names, has gained the position of a household remedy for wounds, bruises, inflammation, &c. In the treatment of piles it often alone suffices to effect a cure, but its most important use will be in the treatment of traumatic injuries, including sprains, bruises, excoriations, cuts, burns, contused and lacerated wounds, as well as corns, bunions, chapped lips, fissured nipples, ulcers, the bites or stings of insects, &c.

P. D. & Co's preparation is equal to any of the brands sold under proprietary names and is about one third the price.

The Hongkong Telegraph

TUESDAY, MARCH 25, 1890.

ARTHUR WILLIAM PATRICK ALBERT, Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, will not be the first of the Hanoverian brood who has taken a flight as far as Hongkong, and we are afraid that he will not be the last.

Next week he will be here, for some ninety-six hours, accompanied by the Duchess—a lady whose parentage, we will wager, there are not twenty people in Hongkong have any idea of. We hadn't until now, when we looked it up.

German! Their Royal Highnesses will call here, as we said, next week, on their way home from India, where the Duke has been principally passing his time in holding alleged reviews, which were about as incomprehensible to him as they were useless to anybody. So the Hon. P. RYRIE, Mr. MITCHELL-INNES, and a "large and influential Committee," have evolved a so-called Address of Welcome, with which we make the fourth column of this issue blush, and which we should like to briefly analyse.

It opens by reciting the twenty-odd decorations which the Duke has got, to remind him that he has them. That is to make him expand his chest. Then it goes on to beg that it may "please" his Highness to stand there two minutes and be grieved to. In the event of his being "pleased" he will next hear a slab of condensed information, taken out of Sir G. W. DES VOGES' great despatch. Up to that point no exception need be taken, but thenceforward the Address is characterised by nauseous and lying phrases the composition of which surely entitles the compiler to expect to be insulted with nothing short of a baronetcy.

To anyone who attended the two burlesque public meetings of the Reception Committee it is simply ludicrous to read that we "unfeignedly rejoice" at this prospect of "proving our loyalty and devotion by the warmth of our welcome to members of the Royal Family."

"And see the apology for the 'slender hospitalities we are in a position to offer.' Why, Hongkong has been kicking like a buck-jumper for the last month at the idea of having to spend $12,000 in this uncalled-for way—our 'slender hospitality'—will cost us, as a community, $2 'for' every minute their Royal 'Uselessnesses are around the shores of this, phenomenal colony! This 'loyalty and devotion' clap-net belongs to a toadying, tuft-hunting, deceased generation, and it will not bear investigation. We endure our monarchical 'system of Government without much complaint because it is such an invertebrate, invisible system, but when scions of the Dutch dynasty come around visiting us, and shewing what perishable articles they are—and, still more so, when we are pledged by proxy to reels of gush which we wouldn't wrap butter in, then we—the 'community'—rise and vigorously protest. It is not the six thousand five hundred Europeans resident in Hongkong who 'give' expression to their respect and admiration for the illustrious and Venerable Ruler," as the address pretends—in nearly every shop and office in this Colony the prevailing opinion, freely expressed in private, is that all this fuss about the Royal visit is a lot of humbug. Yet those same residents are tacitly made to appear to be exuding loyalty at every pore—to be overcome with ecstacy at the condescension of the Duke and Duchess in breathing the same air as us—they are fraudulently made to subscribe to a sickening flood of praise such as might be addressed to a demi-god, and—they will have to pay the piper without getting any of the dancing.

Let us conclude with our 'own little amended Address:—

TO ARTHUR OF CONNAUGHT.

We are glad to see you, since you are passing, and we think you are not the worst of your family, by any means. We do not regard you as a very useful public servant, but you do as a figure-head, and we hope you will keep your place. Come and see our Colony, but pay your own bills, like anybody else, and don't expect us to go into hysterics over you. Tell your Mother how you found us, and mention that this idea of doubling the Military Contribution is unjust. Now enjoy yourself, and let us go on with our work."

THE Band of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders will play the following programme at the Officers' Mess, this evening, commencing at 8 o'clock:—

Overture, "The Barber of Seville." Rossini. Selection, "The Merry Widow." Strauss. Selection, "The Merry Widow." Strauss. Selection, "The Merry Widow." Strauss.

IN his book "Among the Mongols" the Rev. J. Gilmour says they would warn him—"Dismount at my tent another time; we have the cough." "This," says Mr. Gilmour, "seems to be an influenza much dreaded by the Mongols, and while not necessarily fatal, travellers carefully avoid it, and no one would think of using the 'pot and ladle' of a family suffering from it."

THE French cruiser Triomphante, Captain de Cornulier, arrived at Singapore from France on the 16th inst. The Triomphante is the new flagship of the China Station, and has on board Admiral Bessard, who relieves Admiral de la Jaille. She is wooden armed cruiser of 4,700 tons, is 253 feet long, and has a beam of 45 feet, drawing 22 feet of water. Her engines are 2,700 indicated h.p., and she steams 13 knots. She is armed with thirteen guns, six 16-ton, one 8-ton and six 3-ton B.L., and carries a crew of 460 men.

A STORY is told by the Tientsin native papers of a great round mill-stone as big as a cart wheel having been seen drifting down the Peiho. The sight of a stone floating astonished the credulous poor folk along the banks, who had all kinds of wild theories to account for a fact which appears by no means proved to be a fact. Some said it was a star fallen from the sky, which would promptly change into a water-dragon when described by earthly eyes; and sure enough, down it dived when a boat put off to examine it. Others said Hoeph (the Chinese Neptune), in need of a stone to repair his palace of crystal, had sent a yaksha to get it from terra firma. [Williams says these yaksha messengers of Yama in hell, but especially of the Dragon King, his guard who patrols the sea; they have red hair and green faces].

It will be remembered that last month the Japan papers reported the suspension of a paper called the Nishi Nippo, and the arrest of the editor by the Gifu Correctional Court, for having published matter alleged to have been disrespectful to the Emperor Jimmu, and to the absurdity of which proceeding the called attention. We now learn that the editor and publisher have each been punished with the utmost rigour of the law, being sentenced to four years' imprisonment with hard labour, and to pay a fine of yen 100; besides being under police supervision for one year and a half after being liberated. The actual writer of the article in question has been much more severely dealt with, being imprisoned for four and a half years with hard labour, and to pay a correctional fine of yen 150, besides being under police supervision, on the expiry of his term, for the period of two years. These sentences, in the eyes of Europeans, seem monstrous, considering that, as we previously remarked, the potentate referred to has passed away over 2,500 years ago, and his acts may be relegated to the realms of mythology. Judging by this it seems to us a fortunate thing for the foreign Press that it can claim extrajudicial privileges, and that it is not under the benign Press Laws of Japan, otherwise its career would be brought to a very abrupt end. But what will the European and American statesmen think of laws under which such things are possible?

A CURIOUS tale of credulity was partly unfolded at the Police Court this morning. An elderly lady with trousers on told Captain Rumsey, the acting Magistrate, that the other day, when she was unwell, she was passing a fortune-teller's shop, and a man asked her to go in. She did so, and he told her that she was suffering from a "devil-exorciser" in the next room. She visited that gentleman, who first took the only dollar she had and sent her home for three more. On her return he annexed that sum also, and then, covering her head with a cloth, told her to listen at the mouth of a jar, in which he had a "pot" of "joss." She listened, and a voice told her to go home and "kill" the "joss" more, and the "devil" would be covered, and she would be cured. She did as she was told, and she found that the "joss" was a rock. Going home again, she spent the day in raising the required sum, together with four jackets which the joss had included in her prescription, and next day she handed them over, on the understanding that everything was to be returned to-day. When she went for them this morning, however, the fortune-teller, without actually refusing, advised her to have another listen to the bottle-imp, and the same "joss" was told her to go home and "kill" the "joss" more, and the "devil" would be covered, and she would be cured. She did as she was told, and she found that the "joss" was a rock. Going home again, she spent the day in raising the required sum, together with four jackets which the joss had included in her prescription, and next day she handed them over, on the understanding that everything was to be returned to-day. American and the Continent, are against equity and the International treaty. Why should the same telegraphic work over the same distance, and the same route within the boundaries of China be dearer for one party than for another? Russia's getting a terminal rate of 2 francs in China is not to be opposed, but the Russian Minister's tendency to fix this rate for his countrymen only should be prevented.

The Russian agreement was illegal and undiplomatic. We furthermore think that the vigorous protestations of the American Minister, Col. Denby, the Hongkong and Shanghai Chamber of Commerce, and the British, American, and German merchants carried due weight not only with the Tsung-li Yamen, but also with the Russian Government and the public opinion at large. Indeed, the manifestations of the unpopularity of the Telegraph Convention have been many and strong. We heartily congratulate our fellow merchants on the satisfactory result—the non-ratification of the Chefoo Telegraph Convention and its appendix. The Russian agreement, China's telegraphic rights have been unfairly checked in order to suit a party policy not resting upon the broad basis of equity, but upon competitive spirit. If the Convention had been accepted, it would have meant, we hope, will come to reign supreme. China's telegraphic movement cannot be regulated by the cable companies nor can her International tariff be laid down by one government's Minister. But should be the outcome of an International Conference where all parties interested had their say; in fact she should join the International Union without delay. Only in this way the justified expectations of a lower and fairer tariff between the Far East and the West can be realised. Only what is built on the foundation of truth can stand the wave of time. If the Convention had been ratified it would have clearly shown its deficiencies, but we should have had to arm ourselves with patience fourteen long years. A right solution of the question—that, a fair field to all interests, may soon dawn upon us, and we may in a not far off future have the beneficial results. These can be briefly summarised as follows:—For China a dignified status, freedom of telegraphic action, and an increased revenue, and for trade and commerce the substantial impulse of a much less burdensome tariff which, in accordance with all principles of economy, will increase the telegraphic revenue so as to offer a lucrative field not only for the shareholders of the foreign companies but also for China, on whose shores the cables are landed to whose imperial favour they owe twenty years of success.

NOTES FROM CHINESE PAPERS.

Coal and iron, and more especially coal, are indispensable factors in the making of a powerful country. Every energy of our government is now concentrated on the strengthening of China, and with that end it has gradually, during the last fifty years, convinced of the superiority of the superiority of Western methods, been doing our country with arsenals, factories, ship-building yards, and other establishments modelled on the Western plan, until now we can scarcely a province in the Empire without some institution the idea of which is borrowed from foreign countries. For most of these, coal is a prime requisite. Thus the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, with plays such a powerful part in the patriotic work of winning back for China the profits in the Chinese carrying trades before monopolised by foreigners, uses every day a prodigious quantity of coal; and the railway, which though deferred, is by no means forgotten, will also be an immense consumer of both coal and iron. It is but natural, therefore, that the efforts of Chinese politicians should now be strenuously employed on the task of obtaining the necessary quantities of these materials, by the employment, as far as possible, of the mineral wealth which China herself is so richly endowed. How great that outflow has been, will sufficiently appear from the following statistics.

In 1889 China purchased from England, Australia, and Japan 268,000 tons of coal, paying for it over $2,000,000. These two million dollars were spent on foreign coal alone, and there was also a heavy bill of at least as much to pay for arms, munitions of war, and machinery. On the other hand, the small country Belgium, the last to make a treaty with China, has 133 mines working, and produces yearly 20,000,000 tons of coal, of a value of $3,000,000. Belgium herself uses two-thirds of this quantity in her factories, and the other eight-tenths she disposes of to foreign countries, one of these eight-tenths going to France and Germany. In addition to the profits of the sale of her surplus coal, the country has the advantage of being able to give employment to 100,000 of her people in connection with this industry, paying them yearly about $22,470,000, or on an average $220 a head. Thus the government and many classes of the population directly or indirectly benefit by the mines, and the country, though small, is as rich as England or France.

The ill success which naturally followed the outrageous mismanagement of mining enterprises in China under the Ming dynasty, materially retarded their development in later times. The Government, however, was deeply impressed with the necessity of having stores of coal at hand for our ships in the event of a war, when the enforcement of the neutrality laws might make it impossible to procure it from other countries. It is principally to provide for such a contingency that the Viceroy Li Hung-chang sent Sheng Taotai to draw up an agreement with Mr. Goebel, Belgian Consul-General at Shanghai, himself formerly a director of mines in Belgium, under which Mr. Goebel, a mining engineer of high repute and long experience, has been engaged, and has proceeded to Hanyang, where the Viceroy Chang Chi-tung has also some German experts employed whose services were secured at a lower rate of remuneration. May their exertions contribute further to turning the tide of wealth still flowing out of China, into one of wealth flowing in!

SCOTT'S Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphates acts both as food and medicine. It not only gives flesh and strength by virtue of its own nutritious properties, but creates an appetite for food that builds up the wasted body. Read the following:—"Scott's Emulsion is in my opinion an excellent and valuable compound. I have given it to consumptive patients and have been delighted with the results obtained. It is pleasant to the taste and can be borne by the most sensitive stomach."—E. A. ROWWAY, M.D., Butter-Knowle, Darlington. Any Chemist can supply it.—A. S. Watson & Co.
